ABSTRACT

The document is a compendium of abstracts of career materials from a variety of media; materials were reviewed not only in terms of suitability for use by adults, but also in terms of quality of career information. Reading levels have been included for each piece of written career information material. A supplement to a previously published resource guide, the document provides additional career information resources, with increased proportions of materials which are produced in audio-visual media formats, written at reading comprehension levels better suited to adults with lower levels of reading skills, and/or addressed to the needs of women and minorities. Focus has also been placed on inexpensive or free materials. Entries for printed materials are catalogued according to 16 major occupational areas; audiovisual materials are catalogued separately. Forms employed in the adult career education resources survey are appended. (Author/AJ)

PREFACE

RESOURCES: RECOMMENDATIONS FOR ADULT CAREER EDUCATION RESOURCES was published in June 1974. It is a compendium of career materials that may be used in adult education courses to help the interested adult student become more familiar with a wide range of careers. The present volume is a supplement to the 1974 publication with a new set of references. The Supplement emphasizes more than the first volume did career and occupational descriptions encouraging to women and to minority groups. It also contains a separate section on audio-visual materials. The two volumes are offered to those concerned with adult education as a carefully screened source of career information for adult education classes.

The Survey staff wishes to acknowledge the invaluable contribution of Mr. Emmanuel Weinstein, Occupational Analyst, U.S. Department of Labor. Mr. Weinstein assisted the staff in devising the occupational coding system by which all career materials reviewed in Resources have been cataloged.

Grateful acknowledgement is also accorded to members of the Survey's Advisory Committee for their valued assistance in developing review forms for printed and audio-visual materials, as well as their help in establishing style and format for the reviews.

The generous submission of review copies of materials by many organizations is deeply appreciated. Professional and commercial organizations, trade associations, labor unions, state and federal agencies, and publishing houses provided the materials which made this work possible.

INTRODUCTION

Adult career education focuses on preparing, training, or retraining persons for work. Ideally this thrust should culminate in the student's ability to enter a career and deal with the world of work. One goal of career education, then, is to prepare individuals to attain self-fulfillment by learning and preparing for their vocational roles. These roles may be multiple and change throughout one's lifetime. Recent U.S. Department of Labor statistics indicate that the average worker may soon expect to hold five to nine different jobs during his or her working career.

Adults return to school, either Adult Basic Education (ABE) or continuing education, for a variety of reasons. They may consider additional education as a means of self-development or self-fulfillment. Alternatively, they may see education as the necessary first step in attaining basic human needs such as food, clothing and housing. They may also recognize that changing job patterns and developments in technology, products, and markets require continuing education and upgrading of skills. Through career education, adult students may have an opportunity to understand better the role of work in our society, the wide range of career and job opportunities, and the ever-changing job market. The Adult Career Education Resources Survey is based on the premise that adult career education can create career awareness, orientation, exploration, and preparation.

Objectives of the Resources Publications

Adults enrolled in career education may find it helpful to have materials that describe familiar careers or introduce them to new occupations. The two Resources compendiums (the 1974 publication and the present Supplement) provide abstracts of written and audio-visual career materials suitable for adults which describe a wide range of occupations. Each item listed is cataloged according to occupation. The abstracts are designed to permit quick judgments as to their appropriateness for a particular adult education requirements. They offer a useful resource for students, teachers, counselors and librarians.

The Resources volumes are also designed for use in conjunction with career activities suggested in EXPLORATIONS, PART I, REVISED (GUIDELINES FOR CAREER DEVELOPMENT IN ADULT EDUCATION). This companion volume of the Adult Career Education Resources Survey contains field tested career development activities which reinforce skill development in reading, writing, oral communication and critical thinking. It serves as a curriculum guide for the teacher in adult education with the dual purpose of increasing career awareness and utilizing career materials to meet course objectives.

Sources of Career Materials

Much effort was devoted to locating suitable career materials for review. Especially sought were materials available at no charge, single copy free, or at low cost in view of the small budgets usually allotted to adult education programs. Requests for printed and audio-visual materials were sent to trade and professional associations, labor unions, state and federal government agencies, publishers of career information and various educational projects. Literature of the counseling and guidance professions was culled for references.

The most comprehensive source of occupational material is the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor through the Occupational Outlook Handbook and its series of related publications. Heavy reliance has been made on these materials in the Resources Supplement. The reader will find that many other sources use Occupational Outlook publications as basic documents, although each may treat the information in its own unique format and digest the subject matter in readable form for specific audiences. An explanation of the Occupational Outlook Handbook publications is given on page 135 of this text.

Almost all states have employment security agencies which publish career information materials. In this issue of Resources materials are referenced only for those states which will supply copies to out-of-state institutions requesting them. Another criterion for inclusion of state-developed career information is the degree to which it can be generalized for the rest of the country. Those portions of the occupational materials which describe job duties and training requirements tend to be generally applicable. In most cases, however, details such as compensation and employment outlook are usually relevant to local conditions. Residents of every state may find their own state agencies very helpful in supplying current information, probably at no cost.

Any item listed in this compendium may be obtained by writing to the source named in the abstract. Addresses of all sources will be found in Appendix A, the alphabetical listing of sources. Also to be found in Appendix A are the addresses of offices from which publications of the Occupational Outlook Handbook may be obtained, as well as state employment security agencies.

Publishers of career materials frequently have bulk rates if the purchaser desires a significant number of copies of a single item. The same is often true of trade and professional associations. The reader is invited by these organizations to request price information for quantity purchase.

Review of Materials

Career materials received were reviewed by members of the Survey staff. Over half of the items recommended by a staff member for inclusion in this edition of Resources were also reviewed by at least one more staff member.

Two review forms, one for printed materials and one for audio-visual media, were developed for use with the first Resources volume and continued for the Supplement. These forms are reproduced in Appendix B. They may prove useful as a tool for the adult education teacher or student to review career materials not listed in this compendium.

Criteria for review included adequacy of information on description of duties, work settings, compensation, working conditions, and personal training requirements. Appropriateness for an adult population was carefully evaluated. Criteria for audio-visual media included quality of presentation. Priority was given to materials that described careers requiring no more than a high school education.

Reading Levels

The Fry Readability Formula, developed by Dr. Edward Fry of Rutgers University Reading Center, was used to determine reading levels. This formula was selected because of its applicability to a broad range of reading difficulty. The reading level of each piece of career material reviewed has been placed in one of the following groups:

- Reading Level I - Grades 1 - 8
- II - Grades 8 - 12
- III - Grades 12+

Although special attention was given to locating career materials with a reading level at eighth grade or below, such materials were difficult to locate. In fact, many materials received were judged to be at reading level III, a level considered inappropriate for most ABE students and perhaps for others.

However, a reading level estimated to be in Group III may be less formidable than it appears. One factor in measuring reading difficulty is number of syllables per word.

Technical jobs cannot easily be described without including some multi-syllable words which are within the reading vocabulary of almost everybody. Words like occupational, mechanic, refrigeration, stenographer, laboratory, technician, manufacturing, etc. Most materials aimed at jobs not requiring college background are well written. Therefore, even if the readability index is recorded at level III an item should not be disregarded for that reason. It may offer challenging information and may stimulate a slow reader to pursue further education and training.

Abstracts

Each item listed in Resources is annotated. Abstracts are written in a brief, telegraphic style. Differences in abstracts result from varying writing styles of reviewers. A more detailed explanation of the information contained in each review and abstract follows.

Explanation of Reviews: Printed Materials

The following information is included in each review of printed materials:

Catalog Number: Each abstract is categorically classified according to the cataloging system on pages ix-xxii of this book.

Title: Includes subtitles or identifying numbers, such as order numbers.

Author: Listed if given.

Date: Year of publication.

Price: Cost in dollars and cents, No Charge (NC), indicating that a reasonable number of copies will be sent without cost; Single Copy Free (SCF), which usually means that only one copy will be sent, and that one at no cost. Other specifications, such as enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, are shown. (Note: If quantities of a single publication are desired, a bulk rate may be obtained by making preliminary inquiry of the source.)

Pages: Length of printed materials.

Reading Levels:

Reading Level	I - Grades 1 - 8
	II - Grades 9 - 12
	III - Grades 12+

Source: Gives name only. For address refer to Appendix A, the alphabetical listing of sources.

Abstract: Notes areas of information covered in the publication or material. This information may include description of work duties, work settings and conditions, qualifications and preparation, credentials required, methods of job entrance, personal attributes, and advancement possibilities. Employment outlook, income level, other potential personal rewards, history of the occupation, its importance to the community, and advantages and disadvantages of the career may also be included. Style, quality and effectiveness are also considered. Additional information sources, the audience to whom the material is addressed, and any other pertinent information is also noted.

Describes jobs not requiring college degrees in engineering. instrument mechanic, instrument foreman, instrument technician, instrument maker. Discusses background and industries involved, educational requirements, types of schools and sources of information.

Explanation of Reviews: Audio-Visual Media Materials

A considerable diversity of forms are available for career education materials. These media include films of several sizes, filmstrips in combination with records or cassettes, slides with records or cassettes, videotapes and video cassettes, and cassettes or records with printed materials. In some cases a choice of media is offered for the same material.

Information supplied parallels that for printed materials:

Title: Includes subtitles and order numbers.

Media: Shows one or more formats in which materials are offered. If ordering numbers vary according to media, order numbers are given here instead of in Title.

Date: Year of production.

Length: Running time in minutes.

Price: Sale and/or rental costs for each of the media in which materials are offered.

Source: Gives name only. For address, see Appendix A, the alphabetical list of sources.

Abstract: Parallels that for written materials, with suitable comment on audio-visual qualities when necessary.

Offers general information about field — effects of "tight" money, irregularity of work, union membership, apprenticeships, growth of prefabrication and consequent dislocation of work to factories. User's guide contains information on choosing a career and on employment opportunities, earnings, advancement and related references.

CATALOGING SYSTEM

To serve as an organizational framework for the materials reviewed in Resources a classification system was developed. The cataloging system is designed for ease in use and adaptation by adult educators, should they wish to catalog career materials they may acquire. This system has been applied in both the 1974 volume of Resources and this Supplement.

Each major occupational field of the cataloging system is linked to the U.S. Office of Education Career Clusters. Agri-business and Natural Resources, Business and Office, Communications and Media, Construction, Consumer and Homemaking Education, Environment, Fine Arts and Humanities, Health, Hospitality and Recreation, Manufacturing, Marine Science, Marketing and Distribution, Personal Services, Public Services, and Transportation. Appropriate USOE career clusters are noted in the preface description of each major occupational field.

Major occupational fields used in the Adult Career Education Resources Survey cataloging system have been assigned a numerical designation using the first two digits of a five digit system. The Survey's occupational fields have been arranged alphabetically in 16 categories. Two categories appear in Resources' Supplement which do not exist in the 1974 volume in order to accommodate special types of career materials. Category 20.000 is designed for materials which embrace a number of major fields or contain career information of a general nature. Category 21.000 is used for the Occupational Outlook Handbook and the publications associated with that volume.

- 01.000 ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT
- 02.000 COMMUNICATION
- 03.000 CONSTRUCTION
- 04.000 EDUCATION
- 05.000 FINE ARTS
- 06.000 HEALTH SCIENCES

- 14.000 SOCIAL SCIENCES
- 15.000 TECHNICAL SCIENCES
- 16.000 TRANSPORTATION
- 20.000 GENERAL COLLECTIONS OF CAREER INFORMATION
AND MULTI-OCCUPATIONAL MATERIALS
- 21.000 PUBLICATIONS OF BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

The third digit refers to the sub-category which, when utilized, divides an occupational field into several specific career areas. The last two digits are assigned to alphabetically listed, specific jobs and careers. There are 99 spaces for occupations in each subcategory. In this compendium increments of 5 or less, depending on the number of occupations included in each career area, have been utilized. This allows for growth and expansion of the Survey cataloging system.

Note that the designation "99" has been assigned to "other" careers in each occupational field or career area. Such "other" jobs and careers include areas in which there is a scarcity of information, few workers are required, or there is a limited employment outlook. Following is a sample listing and interpretation:

Each occupation is assigned only one listing in the cataloging system. Actuaries, for instance, are listed in OFFICE AND CLERICAL under Insurance Careers, they are not listed in NATURAL SCIENCES under Mathematics Occupations. Familiarity with the cataloging system will facilitate locating occupations that may be in question. If an occupation is not easily located, its placement may be checked in the occupational title index, which alphabetically lists occupations and notes their catalog and page numbers. This index appears at the end of the Supplement.

Following is the complete cataloging system used in this compendium.

01.000

ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT

Most administrative personnel are professional office workers who run or assist in running businesses and other organizations.* Duties of personnel represented in this category include overseeing and assuming responsibility for the accomplishment of specific tasks. Organizational abilities as well as policy and decision-making in the conduct of daily business may also be part of that responsibility. Careers are included from the following U.S. Office of Education Career Cluster areas. Business and Office, Marketing and Distribution, Public Services.

- 01.005 Accountants

Price: $6.85 (Payable to the Superintendent of Documents)
Source: Regional Offices of Bureau of Labor Statistics
 United States Department of Labor

This large volume is issued every two years. It is an authoritative work on occupations, compiled through government resources. The 1974-75 edition examines over 30 major industries and provides descriptive information about 850 occupations and their job prospects.

Reprints of 3 to 8 pages for a specific occupation or a few related occupations are available for a small fee. They are called Employment Outlook for (name of occupation). Some reprints cover major industries, each describing the industry as a whole and its outlook followed by the customary descriptions of the distinctive occupations in that industry. The industry reprints, including descriptions of their occupations, are usually 8 to 14 pages long. Most of the 152 reprints from the 1974-75 edition have been listed in the preceding pages of Resources under the appropriate occupational categories.

Every occupational description covers these elements: nature of the work; job prospects to 1985; personal qualifications and training required; working conditions and pay; chances for advancement; where job openings are located.

Reprints, as well as the Occupational Outlook Handbook and the additional publications listed below, should be ordered from the Regional Offices of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Checks or money orders, however, must be made payable to the Superintendent of Documents. A list of all reprints can be obtained at no cost from the regional offices.

Ask for: Need Information About a Career?

In addition, the reprint titles have been selectively grouped to list occupations with special characteristics. These can also be obtained from the regional offices at no charge:

AUDIO-VISUAL MEDIA

AUDIO-VISUAL MEDIA

The large and increasing number of career-oriented audio-visual materials is represented here by a small sampling of films and filmstrips with either cassettes or records. Agencies and organizations that distribute such materials usually supply order forms with necessary information on purchase and delivery, and particularly about requirements for rental. Distributors' catalogues show alternate forms in which materials are available. They offer options such as different film sizes, compatibility with projection equipment, choice of audio media with filmstrips — and show varying prices for each option.

The sampling given here has been limited by cost and time factors involved in locating, viewing and critiquing materials. A wide range of sources exist: commercial film distributors, specialized educational media developers, trade associations, government agencies, film libraries at universities or other centers and private industry. The relatively few sources used in this Survey were chosen to illustrate content and formats. The reader is invited to seek additional references from the libraries or catalogues of convenient media resource centers.

Many of the media materials, especially films, do not lend themselves to classification under the occupational categories used in this Survey. Such films are usually organized around a career theme and illustrate diverse occupations or careers. In other instances their purpose may be primarily career motivation. Therefore, a high proportion of the entries are classified as general career or multi-occupation materials (Category 20.000), or, if limited at all, are placed in one of the broad category areas such as Construction (03.000), Other Service Careers (13.700), etc. Several nevertheless are specific to a single occupation. Because of the small number of materials classified under any category, the listing below is continuous and not separated by headings. Each entry is nevertheless coded according to the classification system explained in the Introduction.

GRAPH FOR ESTIMATING READABILITY

by Edward Fry, Rutgers University Reading Center, New Jersey

Average number of syllables per 100 words

SHORT WORDS

LONG WORDS

DIRECTIONS. Randomly select 3 one hundred word passages from a book or an article. Plot average number of syllables and average number of sentences per 100 words on graph to determine the grade level of the material. Choose more passages per book if great variability is observed and conclude that the book has uneven readability. Few books will fall in gray area but when they do grade level scores are invalid.

	SYLLABLES	SENTENCES
EXAMPLE: 1st Hundred Words	124	6.6
2nd Hundred Words	141	5.5
3rd Hundred Words	158	6.8
AVERAGE	141	6.3

READABILITY 7th GRADE (see dot plotted on graph)

For further information and validity data see the April, 1968 Journal of Reading and the March, 1969 Reading Teacher.
